Flash floods in Southern Sinai kill two, destroy Na'ama Bay

Jerusalem Post Reporter

EILAT. — Two people were killed and two are still missing after a cloudburst over Southern Sinai caused millions of pounds of damage in Na'ama Bay, about five kilometres from Sharm e-Sheikh (Ophira) early yester-

The victims of the flash flood - which left the tourism area of Sharm looking as though it had been hit by a hurricane — were Tzvika Ben-Natan, 35, deputy director of the civilian administration of Ophira, and Ruth Fischbind of Ramat Hasharon, a soldier serving in the region. Ben-Natan was killed when he was electrocuted by falling cables pulled down in the freak storm. Residents of Na'ama Bay reported that Fischbind was drowned in an underground bunker. Tourists at the Marina Hotel were evacuated from their rooms unhurt as the hill behind the hotel collapsed under the rushing torrents which filled the ground-floor rooms with water and sand from floor to ceiling.

Part of the promenade in front of the Aqua Marine Diving Centre was washed away. The entire camping area and the nine-kilometre road connecting Na'ama Bay with the airport were also washed away.

Evacuation of tourists began late yesterday morning by the army who managed to reach the airport in fourwheel-drive vehicles. Arkis and the Air Force sirlifted supplies from the north to the area.

Telephone connections to Eilat were re-established by last night when The Jerusalem Post managed to reach the exhausted manager of the Marina Hotel, Reuven Barzilai. Rain fell on and off all day Saturday, but the torrential rains began at 11 p.m. and lasted until 4 a.m. yesterday. The weather bureau reported that only 2.6mm. of rain fall were recorded in Ophira. However, the heavy rain came down within a space of about a quarter of an hour. The bureau points out that because of the low pressure system of the Red Sea, they had issued flood warnings for the low-lying regions of Southern Sinai.

The weather bureau said that most of the rain fell in the area of Southern Sinai between Ras Nasrani and A-Tur. Itim reports that Beduin in Southern Sinal say there was a similiar flash flood about 30 years ago — but there was no serious damage since there was no settlement in the Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan's resignation from the cabinet yesterday sent shock waves throughout Israel's political community. But Prime Minister Menahem Begin sought to stifle any sense of a government crisis. He said the coalition parties would in due time — a matter of days begin to decide on a successor. Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin, Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir and Interior Minister Yosef Burg are considered the likely candidates.

Dayan's resignation makes a broader cabinet reshuffle, embracing the Treasury and the embattled Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich, inevitable. The Central Committee of Ehrlich's Liberal Party, which was to have discussed such a change of portfolios yesterday, shelved its deliberations after Dayan's announcement. But coalition leaders feel it will now be easier for Ehrlich to make an elegant exit from the Treasury to another cabinet post, and easier for Begin to shore up his government coalition by appointing Yigal Hurvitz of the State List finance minister.

The parliamentary opposition parties, led by Labour's Shimon Peres, professed, on the other hand, to see Dayan's departure as the beginning of the end of the Begin government.

TEL AVIV. - Foreign Minister Dayan's resignation affords Prime Minister Begin the opportunity to reshuffle his cabinet without causing a coalition crisis.

The opposition reacted yesterday by calling for the government's immediate resignation and for new elections. But all coalition parties came out against new elections before a cabinet reshuffle is attempted.

The coalition partners agreed that Dayan's departure would force Begin to alter the cabinet composi-tion, and especially to re-assign the finance portfolio without upsetting the coalition's delicate belance.

The consensus of the partners is that this will give Begin's government respite - provided he acts quickly to restructure the cabinet. Why did Dayan resign?

By ASHER WALLFISH Post Diplomatic Reporter

Despite Foreign Minister Moshe Davan's talk about differences of opinion with the Likud-NRP coalition over substance and tactics in the autonomy talks, observers could not find many issues on which Dayan clashed with the prevailing trend in the coalition.

One Likud Minister noted that Dayan had in fact abstained or voted against only perhaps two or three of the main principles guiding Israel in the autonomy negotiations. On most elements of the autonomy Dayan had been as firm if not firmer than his colleagues, including Begin, the Minister said.

There is not much sympathy in the cabinet for Dayan's feeling out of things, since he had his chance to run the autonomy talks, and turned it down. "He probably thought that the last night told a Kol Israel interviewer that he had chosen no successor to Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan. Finding a replacement would involve "a number of people and institutions," he said, and he would need a few days to consider the matter.

Begin dismissed the conjecture that he had gone to see Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin immediately after receiving Dayan's resignation yesterday to offer him the post. "We hardly discussed politics," Begin said. Yadin, a former Israel Defence Forces chief of staff, is recovering from a mild heart attack.

Responding to a question about the effects Dayan's resignation might have on the cabinet's function and the government's support in the Knesset, Begin noted that Dayan had said he would support the coalition in

HIRSH GOODMAN reports from Cairo:

Defence Minister Ezer Weizman, in Egypt for three days of sightseeing and two days of talks, was reluctant to discuss the implications of Dayan's resignation for his own political future.

'Ample proof' at hand of PNF illegal action

By IAN BLACK

HOME NEWS

Jerusalem Post Reporter Security forces had "ample evidence" of the illegal activities of the "preparatory committee" of the Palestine National Front, outlawed some 10 days ago, and they were not merely acting out of frustration over the political activities of West Bank

This was clarifled yesterday by senior officials of the West Bank military government at a briefing in the Defence Ministry in Tel Aviv. The officials were responding to reporters' questions about the reason for outlawing a body whose alleged eight members denied all knowledge of its existence or ac-

They dismissed suggestions that the ban was issued to indicate displeasure with the political activity of mayors and other public figures in the administered territories both at home and during visits abroad.

The officials reiterated their view that the "preparatory committee" was involved in organizing political activity in the administered territories on behalf of and in coordination with the PLO.

They noted that its activities had ceased since warning notices were issued to its eight members. That, they commented, 'was the point of the whole thing." Reviewing political and other territories in the last three months, the officials noted that during this period, the political activity had moved abroad, leaving the domestic scene unusually quiet. At one point as many as eight West Bank mayors were attending pro-Palestinian cussions in Jordan. The officials declined to say what steps, if any, might be taken against West Bankers who had made anti-Israel statements during their travels, but said that they were paying particular attention to the meeting in Madrid between Hebron Mayor Fahd Kawasma and PLO leader Yasser Arafat. Kawasma is still abroad and is expected home

The officials noted that the visits abroad were part of a "concerted propaganda offensive" by the PLO, and that the presence of leaders from the West Bank and Gaza strengthened the local leadership in the territories.

They also pointed to an upsurge in Jordanian activity in the West Bank, reflected in the holding of a personal registration project (something akin to a census, raising the salaries of former Jordanian employees fired by Israel, and an intimation that Amman would not accept the results of matriculation examinations carried out in the West Bank.

The officials stressed, however, that it was too early to say that Jordan was seeking in any significant manner to reassert its influence on the West Bank. It was necessary, they cautioned, to judge this activity in the light of earlier experience.

There had been no significant increase in sabotage or other hostile activity in the areas in the last few months, the officials said, although there had been a notable upswing in civil unrest during Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Haifa in September and the demonstrative settlement activities of Gush Emunim over the past few weeks.

Hatikva Quarter children start learning by computer

By ALAN ELSNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - A precursor of the classroom of the future was revealed yesterday in the most unlikely of settings when Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat unveiled a $22,000 computer system in the Hayarden elementary school in the Hatikva Quarter at 9 a.m.

Financed by the United Jewish Appeal of New York as part of Project Renewal, the system will revolutionize teaching in the troubled neighbourhood. The system's designer, Dr. Yona Peled of the Tel Aviv University-based Centre for Educational Technology, expects schools throughout the country to be affected by the computers within the next few years. The system goes under the code name of TOAM (computer-assisted testing and drill) and is an Israeli development. A computer terminal is installed in the school with TV screen terminals on the desks of each individual pupil. After the teacher has gone over the class material with the pupils, they work solely with the computer. So far, the computer system of teaching has only been applied to mathematics, but the Education Ministry has been so impressed with the preliminary results that it has approved a budget for new programmes to be developed for teaching Hebrew, English, and this is signalled on the screen and the next question appears. If the wrong answer is given, the computer gives two more chances to the pupil before signifying the right answer.

All the time, the computer is assessing the pupil's progress. If the questions are too difficult, it automatically adjusts to the pupil's level by making them easier. If the pupil is consistently achieving correct answers, the computer makes the questions more challenging.

"It's like each pupil having his own personal tutor," said Dr. Louis Ossin, who has worked on developing the system and surveyed its results so far. "Instead of some pupils being left hopelessly behind while the class progresses, or others sitting bored because the other pupils cannot learn fast enough, each pupil's individual attention is retained all the

Eggs, cookies, noodles to be 10% dearer soon

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Yesterday's hike in the prices of wheat flour, soy beans and grains will increase the prices of eggs and flour products in the next few days. The increases are expected to be on the order of 10 per cent.

The Egg and Poultry Marketing Board will hike the price of eggs shortly as a result of the increased cost of chicken feed. Cakes and confectionary items will go up immediately.

Increasing the prices of noodle products and popular-priced biscuits needs the approval of the commissioner of prices and the Public Prices Committee.

Hiking the cost of flour and soy beans, without a commensurate hike in the prices of bread and oil, will considerably increase the subsidy rate on these products. The subsidy on standard ("black") bread goes up from 120 per cent to 160 per cent. The subsidy on white bread jumps from 80 to 115 per cent, and the oil subsidy increases from 56-85 per cent to 77-110 per cent, depending on type.

The Treasury spokesman said yesterday there were no plans to cut subsidies on basic commodities at this point — a move which would increase their cost to the consumer. A plan to cut subsidies exists, but the final go-ahead awaits a political

Vance 'regrets' Dayan move, praises his peace role

Jerusalem Post Correspondent and Agencies

WASHINGTON .. - Secretary of State Cyrus Vance yesterday expressed "personal regret" at the resignation of Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

A spokesman for President Jimmy Carter, however, declined to com-ment. "We don't comment on changes in other governments," presidential press secretary. Jody Powell said when asked about the resignation.

Although the announcement issued by the State Department in Vance's name noted that the matter was Israel's internal affair, the fact that an announcement was made appeared to indicate solidarity with the reasons Dayan gave for his resignation.

Vance is in La Paz for a meeting of foreign ministers of the Organization of American States.

The announcement said, "This is an internal affair of Israel in which we are not involved. Therefore we have no comment on the reasons for the resignation. "On a personal level, however, let me say that I and every one of us in our government who has worked with him has the highest regard for. Moshe, both personally and professionally," the Vance statement added.

"He is a man whose talents and long experience we greatly respect and admire. He has made an outstanding contribution not only to the peace process in the Middle East but also to U.S.-Israel relations." Dayan's resignation took Western Europe by surprise and most com-mentators said that it will mark a "further toughening" of Israel's policy on the future of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Radios and television channels, in France, West Germany and Italy, flashed the news and headlined the development in their mid-day newscasts. There are practically no Sunday papers in continental Europe.

There were no official reactions. as governments tend to regard the resignation as an internal Israeli atfair. Radio and television commentators stressed, however, that Dayan is condsidered a "hawk" on the Continent and that his resignation shows that the line adopted by the rest of the Begin government is even

West Bankers see Dayan as 'fed up'

By IAN BLACK Jerusalem Post Reporter

Public figures on the West Bank were as surprised as everyone else yesterday by the resignation of Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and tended to interpret his move as directly related to the autonomy

Dr. Nafez Nazzal, a young lecturer at Bir Zeit University, said he believed that although Dayan did not favour withdrawal from the territories, his resignation indicated that the government as a whole "has not the slightest intention of letting go of the West Bank and Gaza." Nazzai believed that Dayan's contacts with foreigners in his capacity as foreign minister had convinced him that the world does not accept Israel's stand on the Palestinian question. "Personally," he added, "I think he's fed up. We hope that a new government will be elected — both for Israel, and the Palestinians. The present policy is simply not going in the right direction." Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij reacted similarly, noting that Dayan's meeting with world leaders - particularly his recent contacts with the heads of the European Economic Community — had con-vinced him of the "futility of Israeli policy on the Palestinian question." Freij also believed that Dayan was fed up with the "so-called autonomy negotiations, and the vicious circle in which they are revolving.

"I hope," the mayor declared,
"that his resignation will cause Israelis to stop and think what is wrong with their government's policy. I hope now they will be more realistic and forget their complex of-hating the Palestinians and opposing the realization of their legitimate national rights."

Ibrahim Dakkak, head of the West Bank Engineers Union, told The Jerusalem Post last night that he believed that Dayan had left the government "for his own purposes and to serve the purposes of Israel.
"We Palestinians," he said. "didn't have much confidence in him. The autonomy negotiations will go on, pechaps in a different form. I ion't know whether we'll gain from "The question of our relationship to the Arabs of the areas (not with the PLO) has appeared to me throughout all the years as a key question in our life and one capable of solution. At any rate, there is today no question more actual than this - both in our domestic life and particularly in our foreign relations. Every talk we conduct with leaders of European countries, the Far East and particularly the U.S. is focused mainly on this matter and hence, in my opinion, it is not possible for a foreign minister to perform his function properly without him being personally engaged, involved and being among the formulators of Israel's policy on this question.

"It is no secret to you that I differ over the manner (the technique) and the substance whereby the autonomy negotiations are being conducted, and this applies, too, to a number of activities performed by us on the ground. prove groundless. True, only four months have passed since the negotiations commenced: but to my great regret I believe that in large measure the negotiations presently under way are fruitless. Be this as it may, whether I am right or not, my perception as I see it prevents me from participating in this matter; I have no doubt that given such a situation a foreign minister cannot curry out his office and that it means that he deals with the marginal subjects and not with the issue that stands at the centre of our policies. chunks of Judea and Samaria." Dayan said: "It is Israel's good fortune that this government is ruling now and it was my great privilege to serve under Begin, especially because of his firm stand on Judea and Samaria.''

He said he had been proud to work along with a man like Sharon, who had advanced the cause of settlement in the areas with great vigour, and he regarded Sharon's unconventional language as insignificant when compared with his contribution to the country.

Dayan then left the cabinet chambers after shaking Begin's hand. This was just around noon. At once, the news of his resignation spread like wildfire. It reached the world over the news agencies before it was announced over Kol Yisrael. Under the Basic Law: Government. Dayan will be in office for 48

Dayan bombshell greets Knesset winter session

By ARYEN RUBINSTEIN Post Knesset Reporter

Moshe Dayan's resignation and its implications will undoubtedly be the subject of the day in the Knesset restaurant and in the faction meetings today, as the House convenes for its winter session. But only tomorrow will it be reflected in the plenum, when Prime Minister Menahem Begin is scheduled to inform the House of the resignation.

Unlike a government statement announcing a new appointment to the cabinet, a statement on a minister's resignation does not entail a debate. If the opposition wishes a debate on the subject, it must submit, a request backed by 30 signatures; and if it does, the debate will be held next Monday.

However, Dayan's leaving the government will surely be exploited by the Alignment when it presents its no-confidence motion tomorrow

The Alignment motion, submitted to the Knesset Speaker yesterday morning, before Dayan's resignation became public knowledge, is based on "the economic and social deterioration in the country, and the non-functioning of the government."

Other opposition parties are expected to submit no-confidence motions of their own today, and these too will be heard tomorrow. Today's session will open at 4 p.m. as scheduled, with Labour and Social Affairs Minister Israel Katz presenting the government's guaranteed income bill for its first reading. Kats has described this as a "basic law" to safeguard a "basic right" of the citizen. It provides, as a matter of law, that those unable to support themselves shall be provided by the government with the resources for

The exception was the result of a "deal," Although one special session was held last Monday at the Alignment's request, it also presented 30 signatures requesting another special session to present two other motions for the agenda, one dealing with "the non-functioning of Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i" and the other with "extra-legal" financial support for Agudat Yisrael institutions. But the Alignment faction accepted the Knesset Secretariat's proposal that in return for withdrawing the request the factions be permitted to air the two motions this Wednesday outside of its regular quota.

Knesset members will find on their desks this afternoon a statement from Knesset Clerk Netanel Lorch informing them that the individual microphones on their desks have been replaced by five microphones placed in different parts of the

It was not planned that way. The statement was to have been dis-tributed today, the day Knesset technicians were scheduled to complete the work, but the technicians were a week early. But no progress was made during the summer recess on the Speaker's proposal to introduce 'urgent parliamentary questions," which would resemble Question Time in the British House of Commons.

Dayan move prevents showdown by Liberals

By SARAH HONIG

Post Political Reporter TEL AVIV. - The Dayan resignation effectively cancelled yester-day's expected "showdown" session between supporters and opponents of Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich in the Liberal Party's Central Com-

Planned motions of confidence and no-confidence in Ehrlich never even made it to the agenda yesterday. Instead of a showdown on whether Ehrlich should continue in his post, the meeting was brief and after some procedural wrangling, ended in anti-climax.

The finance minister himself an nounced in a satisfied tone that 'Dayan's move will have a positive influence on the possibilities for reorganizing the cabinet."

The Central Committee then adjourned after approving an earlier patch a delegation to Prime Minister Begin to urge a government reshuffle.

Most committee members seemed to share Ehrlich's view, and expressed relief that the Dayan move has spared the Liberals from a suicidal battle to force a cabinet reshuffle.

The proposal that the committee limit itself to the dispatching of the 11-man delegation to Begin and not vote on any other motions came from Ehrlich's arch-rival, Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i. Moda'i said that "Dayan's resignation has changed the whole situation and offers an opening for wide-ranging rsonnel changes in the cabinet."

Ehrlich told the committee that he is willing to vacate his cabinet seat anytime. "I did not ask for my portfolio and am willing to give it up. The government's functioning does not hinge only on the finance ministry and there will now be an extensive reshuffle," he said.

Eurlich also told the committee that Begin had told him about his decision to appoint Dayan very shortly before he announced it publicly. "I wasn't overjoyed and I had my doubts, although I honoured Begin's decision," he said. The finance minister's a The Jerusalem Post that he is "very satisfied by the committee's decision. He sees the fact that no motions were brought up as an expression of confidence in him. He himself is ready for any reshuffle idea, including one in which he would give up his portfolio."

WIZO launches battered-wife homes

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. - WIZO, known for its network of baby homes throughout the country. is about to launch a nationwide chain of shelters for battered wives. A WIZO spokesman, quoting a survey conducted by the Women's International Zionist Organization, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that some 60,000 cases of wife-beating were reported in Israel last year and that many more cases are presumed unreported.

For this reason, she said, WIZO is undertaking the support and conatruction of a network of shelters for battered wives and their children.

WIZO is raising funds for a shelter in Beersheba in a fashion show this evening at the Herzliya residence of U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Samuel

"Hundreds of battered wives are forced to leave home with their small children, and the two shelters in Haifa and Herzliya are not nearly large enough to take all these women in." the spokesman said.

Beersheba Mayor Eliahu Nawi and the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry have agreed to support the shelter, whose purchase is in the last stages of negotiations. It will be the first in a network which WIZO plans to establish all over the country.

The shelter will be operated by volunteers and social workers in Beersheba, the spokesman said.

WIZO is also extending legal help and supplying clothes and furniture to the battered wives shelters which arc operated by feminist organizations in Haifa and Herzliya.

Man, 27, wounds wife, kills self

HADERA (Itim). — A Pardess Hanna shopowner shot and seriously injured his wife, then killed himself with the same revolver on the beach near Sdot Yam on Saturday night. An army beach patrol noticed a white car parked on the beach at about 10:30 p.m. When they approached, they found Moshe Gershon, 27, bleeding profusely from the head, and his wife Mimi, 20, also in a pool of blood. They spotted a revolver on the rear seat of the car. The couple was rushed to Hillel Yaffe Hospital in Hadera, and from there to Rambam Hospital in Haifa. Moshe Gershon died on the operating table, and his wife was in critical condition yesterday.

The couple had been married for a few months. Neighbours in Pardess Hanna said they were natives of the town and described them as "very quiet and well mannered."

J'lem officials and Ohel make peace

By ROBERT ROSENBERG Jerusalem Post Reporter

Setting aside "past misunderstandings," the Jerusalem Municipality and the neighbourhood organization Ohel pledged full cooperation after a meeting yesterday between Ohel activitists and Mayor Teddy Kollek and his staff.

Ohel, made up of former social workers and residents of poor neighbourhoods, has clashed with the city over responsibility for projects in those neighbourhoods. One: has declared itself independent of 'charity and sociology' programmes dictated from above. At yesterday's meeting, a plan was drawn up to have Ohel members represented on community centre boards in the city. The city promised to consult with Ohel to coordinate social work in the neighbourhoods, and the city will discuss ways to help Ohel develop an arts centre, a leadership training seminar and a synagogue was laid in Jerusalem's Jewish Quarter yesterday, although no design for the building has yet been approved.

Participating in the ceremony were members of the family of the late Sir Charles Clore of England, who bequeathed a substantial sum for rebuilding the Hurva, which was destroyed by the Jordanians after the War of Independence.

Government and municipal officials are to meet this week to discuss a new architectural approach proposed for the Hurva.

Disgruntled commuters stage Binyamina train takeover

Jerusalem Post Reporter

BINYAMINA. — Trains on the Haifa-Tel Aviv line were delayed by 90 minutes yesterday morning as residents and schoolchildren of Binyamina protested against the winter timetable which went into effect yesterday.

The new schedule deprives the village of five daily trains, but keeps intact all the stops at nearby Atlit. Local residents claim the reason for the disparity is the influence of Likud Knesset Member Pessach Grupper — a resident of Atlit.

About two dozen citizens of Binyamina and the area took over the first train that arrived from Tel Aviv by climbing in and out of the coaches, police reported. Other demonstrators carried placards. local pupils who were let out of class to participate.

The passenger trains stopping at Binyamina serve a fairly large area – including Givat Ada, Pardess Hanna and other localities - none of which have direct bus service to Tel Aviv or Haifa. Many people in the region depend on the trains for commuting.

Courts: German sect can build Binyamina homes

By YAACOV FRIEDLER Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. - The German Christian Bethel sect, headed by Emma Berger, may continue building four three-storey apartment houses in Binyamina, the Haifa Magistrates and District Courts have ruled,

The messianic sect, led by a former nurse from southern Germany, has for the past 15 years been buying land and buildings in Zichron Ya'acov and nearby Binyamina at above-market prices - despite opposition from some residents there who object to the group both as Germans and as suspected missionaries. The group denies any missionary in-

Fourteen Binyamina residents recently applied to the courts for an injunction compelling the group to cease construction of four buildings in the village on the grounds that the buildings' proposed third storeys were illegal (though they have been licensed by the regional building committee) and would cause them both financial loss and a reduction in the enjoyment of their own properties since they would change the character of the area.

A hearing has been set for next May in Halfa District Court. But, ruled Magistrate A. Rand.

when the appellants sought a tem-porary injunction until May, Binyamina has already lost its village character. It has no unified architectural standard and there are industrial buildings and a railway station in the vicinity of the disputed buildings, he said. While the residents claimed to object to the third storeys, on a visit to the village, he had seen other houses were of similar height.

The judge also dismissed the claim that the houses threatened the residents' view pointing out that during his visit he had seen neglected and dirty buildings that hardly constituted a fine view at present. Nor would the new buildings add to noise and crowding, he ruled, since they were being constructed between the appellants' homes and the railway and might thus even block the trains Rejecting an application for leave to appeal the magistrate's decision. District Court Judge Eugenia Vingradov said the appellants had no chance of winning such an appeal.

New comprehensive school in Galilee

Disease, hunger kill Kampucheans, but relief supplies building up

BANGKOK. - Up to 20 Kampuchean had been dispatched to the frontier refugees are dying from disease every day in areas along the Thai border, a British doctor said yester-

Dr. Jeffrey Archer of the Christian charity organization. World Vision, told Reuters that medicines were urgently needed to help the sick and starving people who have fled to Thailand.

Some 70,000 Kampucheans have crossed into Thailand over the last two weeks to escape sporadic artillery and small arms duels between Victnamese-led forces of the Phnom Penh administration and guerrillas loyal to ousted Kampuchean premier Pol Pot.

Many of the refugees have been weakened by prolonged undernourishment and suffer from malaria and other diseases, Archer

Military sources at the border said they were trying to provide the refugees with 300 grams of rice a day (the World Health Organization minimum figure for sustenance is 500 grams).

But food supplies have been sent to the border in bigger quantities during the past few days. World Food Programme (WFP) officials in charge of getting food to the area said recently that 9,000 tons of rice and other food convoys have also been sent.

Thai Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan last week opened the way for increased medical help - so far handled by the Thai Red Cross - by announcing he would allow foreign medical teams to work with the refugees.

Kriangsak, who spoke at a meeting of diplomats and aid officials, said Thailand would open its doors to any Indochinese refugee determined to come to his country. Relief agencies have said they expect the open-door policy to lead to a considerably higher number of people heading for Thailand. At least 150,000 have already crossed famine-hit northwest Kampuchea and gathered near the Thai frontier in a desperate search for Yesterday four people, including three Thais, were killed and seven others injured when a barrage of 20 mortar rounds from across the Kampuchean border landed in an open market about four kms. inside Thailand near Khok Sung.

The dead from the 82mm. mortar rounds included two Thai men, a Thai woman, and one Kampuchean man who was buying supplies.

That officials said they believed Vietnamese troops inside Kampuchea fired the mortars, as they did one week ago when five Kampuchean refugees were killed at a camp just south of Khok Sung.

The shelling of the market, where Kampucheans cross to buy black market goods from Thai traders, came one day after Vietnam's acting foreign minister Nguyenco Thach declared that Vietnamese troops would not cross the border into Thai territory, (Reuter, AP)

The Times' labour dispute ends

LONDON (Reuter). — "The Times," one of the great newspapers of the world, is expected to be back in print soon following an agreement vesterto end a labour dispute has silenced it for 11 months.

""The Times' will be re-published as soon as we can." managing director Marmaduke Hussey told reporters. Senior journalists estimated that the presses would roll within about one month.

Last Thursday the owners, the Canadian-based Thomson group, said they were determined to keep it and "The Sunday Times" alive. But they also said they would have 1500 GMT yesterday with the main print union, the National Graphical ation (NGA).

A bargain was struck yesterday morning within five hours of the deadline and after 26 hours of nonstop negotiation. Union leaders predicted that rank and file would vote approval.

PLO to avenge' suicide of man 'tortured' by Germans

BEIRUT (AP). - The PLO vowed yesterday to punish West Germany for "torturing and brainwashing" a terrorist agent eight months ago.

The terrorist, identified as Abdel-Wali Abdel-Hafez Abed — code name Mohammed Youssef — returned to Lebanon from Germany last June and tried to take his own life a week ago, according to the Palestinian news agency, WAFA.

Abed, a member of Yasser Arafat's Fatah group, died at the Beirut hospital last Thursday of a wound sustained "when he tried to kill himself with his own gun," Fatah said in a statement.

The statement said Abed was arrested in West Germany last February on charges of possessing explosives.

"He was subjected to physical and psychological torture by (agents of) the Israeli Mossad intelligence and 6 months......IL1,810 West German intelligence," said Fatah.

It claimed that Abed had come back to Beirut last June "with instructions to assassinate one of Fatah's leaders, and was threatened that, if he didn't carry out the (Israeli-West German) orders, his family in the Israeli-occupied lands "would be killed."

Abed opted to take his own life, according to the Fatah statement. The leftist newspaper "A-Safir," known for its strong Palestinian connections, quoted an unnamed terrorist source as saving that Abed was ordered to kill Abu Iyad, Arafat's right-hand man and leading strategist. But Mahmoud Labadi, spokesman for the PLO, disclaimed any knowledge of Abu Iyad being the target of the purported assassination

Apathetic Swiss have new assembly

BERNE (UPI). - Switzerland elected a new parliament on Sunday with early returns showing, as expected, little change in the strongly conservative composition of the upper and lower houses.

Turnout among the country's 3.8 million registered voters was disappointingly low, falling to 24 per cent in one canton.

Computer predictions said the nationwide turnout probably would be around 50 per cent. The elections are held every four years.

The world crown has been split in two since former champion Muhammad Ali refused to obey WBC orders regarding whom he should fight.

Political arrests mount in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP). -The number of politicians and political activists arrested since Tuesday reached a total of 372 yesterday, according to an official

The arrests came after President Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Hag banned all political parties. He also announced last week that national elections scheduled for November 1 would be postponed indefinitely. A large number of those arrested are supporters of the Pakistan People's Party founded by Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the former prime minister who was executed last year. Most of the arrests were made under a martial law order against activities prejudicial to maintenance of public order.

Soldiers keep S. Korea quiet

PUSAN, South Korea (AP). -Thousands of patrolling soldiers kept this port city and nearby Masan quiet for a second day yesterday, following four days of student-led rioting against the government.

Army trucks filled with elite paratroopers, carrying loaded M-16 rifles with fixed bayonets, drove up and down the streets during the day. occasionally broadcasting warnings through loudspeakers against 'spreading rumours" and violating the 10 p.m. curfew in both cities.

Other soldiers patrolled on foot in groups of three, while tanks and armoured personnel carriers were stationed in front of important buildings and at major intersections.

Several hundred persons reportedly were arrested in Pusan on Saturday night for curfew violations, but there were no demonstrations.

Pusan, South Korea's second largest city, remained under martial law. The army remained in charge of security in Masan under a 'garrison decree," one step short of martial law. There was no indication by the government when the troops would be withdrawn from either city. An estimated 1,350 demonstrators were arrested in the riots last week. and at least 79 persons were injured. The anti-government demonstrations started on Tuesday night in Pusan with university students angered by the recent expulsion of outspoken opposition leader Kim Young Sam from the National Assembly because of his sharp criticism of the Park Chung Hee Government. All 69 opposition lawmakers resigned last week to protest the expulsion.

Kurds propose peace plan as new fighting hits Iran

TEHERAN (UPI). — Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan yesterday took Kurdish proposals for peace to Ayatoliah Ruhollah Khomeini while insurgents pressed government forces holding Kurdish cities since early September.

Bazargan took along five ministers to the 79-year-old Islamic leader's headquarters in Qom, 130 km south of the capital. Saturday night he discussed the undisclosed Kurdish proposals with his cabinet.

A key issue is aminesty for two Kurdish leaders, outlawed and driven into hiding when Khomeini mobilized the armed forces against Kurdish rebels last August. He has since repeated he will pardon all Kurds except those two.

Meanwhile, gunfire rattled the northwestern city of Mahabad yesterday, but no details on casualties were available. The city has been the scene of almost daily clashes between Kurdish rebels and government troops since early. September, and fighting has been especially heavy there since last week.

Communication was cut with other towns in the area as sporadic firing was reported from village to village. Government sources blamed "leftists" for "prolonging the Kurdish

Brazilian Communist leader returns

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP). - Luis Carlos Prestes, the head of the illegal Brazilian Communist Party (PCB), returned to Brazil on Saturday night after 15 years in exile.

Thousands of cheering onlookers, many coming from hundreds of kilometres away, were on hand at Rio's Galeao International Airport to meet the Communist leader, who arrived from Paris.

Prestes, 82, got up on a makeshift platform in the airport and thanked his supporters, saying he had returned "more communist than ever" to fight for the legalization of the PCB. Prestes is one of nearly 5,009 Brazilians to benefit from the military government's recent amnesty for political prisoners and exiles.

When the military took power here in a 1964 coup, Prestes was the first of thousands of suspected leftists to lose their political rights. The PCB leader fled the country and eventually took up residence in Moscow, where he lived for eight years before his return to Brazil.

Bonn gives Hua low-key welcome

BONN (Reuter). - Chinese Communist leader Hua Guofeng (Kuofeng) yesterday flew into a quiet welcome in West Germany where government leaders do not want his visit to upset relations with the Soviet Union.

The reception at Cologne-Bonn airport lasted just six minutes, a marked contrast to the gala airport welcome with full military honours given by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing when Hua arrived in Europe last Monday. West German officials said the modest reception by North Rhine-

Westphalia State Premier Johannes Rau and Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski conformed with usual practice.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt will officially greet Chairman Hua at the Chancellery tomorrow.

There was no chance that Schmidt would demonstratively abandon . protocol as he did in July last year to provide an airport welcome for U.S. President Jimmy Carter. Schmidt has made it plain he will not be drawn into taking sides in Peking's quarrel with Moscow, which would damage relations with Russia.

THIS OLD Latin proverb suum cuique means "something for everybody," or more freely. "Everybody gets his due," which is what this column is about: Something for everybody. Every reader should be able to find a gardening item of special interest to him. This is not an easy task. During the three years I have been writing this column (which marks its third anniversary this week) I have always tried to use a variety of themes and mentioned various problems in gardening, taking into account the sometimes extreme contrasts in climate and in soil conditions in different parts of Israel. The interests of series

The interests of readers also vary.

During the last three years, I received hundreds of letters and phone calls. Some were messages of support and gratitude, most were from people with questions, seeking advice.

One woman who mentioned her age, well over 80, was still quite active with her balcony garden and wanted a source for healthy plants. Other readers asked about planting roof gardens or balcony containers. Some were interested in kitchen herbs, others in hydroponics or bottle gardening.

Some of these hobby gardeners

Some of these hobby gardeners possess considerable ground for gardening and wanted to know everything about fruit trees or roses. Others had so limited a space that they hardly had room for one or two containers, but for them it's still "the garden." Many readers asked for copies of columns, because they wanted to send them abroad. One reader, worried about dark spots on leaves of a plant, mailed an affected leaf to me. Unfortunately, there was a postal strike on, so that by the time the letter arrived, the leaf had turned entirely brown and the spots were no longer visible.

I felt very proud, when a woman, through the good offices of the UN in Jerusalem, asked for a remedy to cure her sick lawn in Amman. Many readers invited me to see their gardens and to solve problems on the spot. In Jerusalem, I agreed to this and visited a large number of gardens of different kinds, but for readers elsewhere in the country, I could provide only written advice.

People have atrong feelings about plants. Some are interested in cactus plants only, others in geraniums. Many hate cactl or geraniums (without reason, in my opinion) and you need patience sometimes to find "something for everybody." Some readers told me about their success with rare house plants and orchids, and I felt I could learn from their experience. Ail garden enthusiasts, I believe, should never stop learning. No one knows everything. There is always something new to discover in a neighbour's garden, at horticultural exhibitions or in books on gardening.

The most exciting phone call I received as author of Gardener's Corner came to me some time ago from Tel Aviv:

"Hallo, are you Mr. Frankl of The Jerusalem Post's Gardener's Corner?" When I said "Yes," the voice continued: "I am speaking here from the mails." This was a bit bewildering, and almost frightening since at the time the media were running stories about organized crime in Israel. But my caller then cleared the air.

the air:
"My mafia ("bakery" in Hebrew)

also want to produce blueberry cakes. Could you help us find somebody who will grow blueberries

IN THE second half of October there is much to be done in the garden before the big rains interrupt outdoor work. Here are some things to think about — something for everybody.

Vegetables you can plant now are cauliflower, broccoli, cabbage, kohlrabi and lettuce. Sow in trenches radishes, onion bulblets for green onions, spinach and paraley. Build the beds 10-12 cm. above ground level as a precaution against winter flooding. Prepare the soil well with compost or manure additions and dig it deeply.

Vines. Perennial vines can be planted in all seasons. They provide shade and beautiful flowers. Have a look into your garden to determine if there is still "a vacancy" for vines. They are offered at nurseries in three- or five-kilo tins. Transplant with the whole root ball undisturbed into a planting hole 50-60cm. deep and sufficiently wide. It should be half-filled with a 50:50 compost-soil mixture.

Vines should be tied to a wire fence, trellis or pergola. Water once or twice a week in rainless periods and place a leaf mulch around their stems as a protection against winter frosts. All deciduous trees and shrubs start to drop their foliage just now. Collect these leaves for the best mulch material we know. Don't be surprised when the newly planted vines do not grow much during the winter. All old vines in the garden should be pruned now and re-tied to their permanent support.

Vines as companions for trees. Beautiful garden scenes can be created by vines climbing through the branches of a host tree, but not every perennial climber can be recommended for this decorative combination. Wisteria, for instance, well known in Israel for its long clusters of lavender blooms, is a pleasant sight climbing on the branches of a pine tree. But the price is too high

Sooner or later the wisteria will strangle the pine to death, even a great strong tree. Before planting vines on trees, find out which plants are suitable and which make trouble. Some vines grow rapidly, constrict and girdle the tree until its cambium (the ring of annual growth of tree bark and wood cells) is destroyed. The tree then dies, and the first strong wind storm will blow it over.

Less than two years ago, I planted a perennial morning glory (tpomoea purpuren) close to an old cypress tree in my garden. Since morning glory is deciduous and looses its foliage in winter, nothing was left from the plant in spring, except a nearly invisible, bare, dark brown stem. Its colour was so similar to that of the tree bark, I had overlooked the fact that in a few months of summer the morning glory had climbed to the top of my six-metres high cypress tree. When the pleasant blue glories appeared, one of my neighbours from an upper story called, "Hallo, Walter, your cypress tree is blooming!"

Climbing roses also work well when suitable varieties are chosen, and the foliage of the host plants is not too dense. If your nurseryman still has climbing roses in tins, you can plant them now. If not, wait another five to six weeks when new dormant ones will be available. English ivy is not considered a threat to most trees, as it has no strangling tendencies, and its growth is not heavy enough to injure trees. The decorative try growing on old Jerusalem pines in the garden of Jerusalem's Yad Ben-Zvi is more than two decades old but has not damaged the trees. In my own garden, white-green ivy (hedera canariensis) climbs up some 15 metres on various pines and fits well into the landscape without doing any harm. Such a combination of perennial vines with their tree companions could become a focal point in your cacti should not be watered until March. The winter rains will be sufficient to keep them alive. Even without these rains, they would not die, because they don't need water during their dormant winter period. In heated rooms, however, cacti need a good spray once a fortnight. Place your cygocactus truncatus (better known as "Christmas cactus") in the spot where you want it to flower. Don't move the pot or even turn or change its position until all its flowers fade (in late winter). Then you can lift it and place it in a cooler spot for a rest and water sparingly. Every move of a plant during its blooming time will result in the dropping of its beautiful flowers. These rules hold true for syntted and ungrafted species.

Disbudding chrysanthemums. The first chrysanthemum blooms are appearing now and will probably last for a good while. If you are interested in bigger (but fewer) blooms, remove half of the flower buds before their colour becomes visible and feed each plant with half a teaspoonful of "20-20-20" fertilizer. Don't spread the pink stuff too close to, stems and water immediately. Look at your mums carefully and spray with malathen when black plant lice are seen sucking on the Bulbs: Set out more bulbs for, spring blooms such as callas, Dutch irises, freesias, anemones; ranunculi, gladioli, crocuses and hyscinths. Wait with tulips until November. It is traditional on Purim (March 2, 1980) to exchange gifts with family and friends. Can there be a more beautiful present than a potted hyacinth with its unsurpassable fragrance? Prepare your presents now. Fill some flower pots with the conventional pot mixture (soil-sand-compost in equal parts), set the bulbs in (not less than 10-12 cm. deep) and place the planted pots in a wind-protected spot in half

Let the desert bloom. When I recently paid a visit to Maale Adumim, the hilly settlement off the Jerusalem-Jericho road in a rocky desert terrain, I was deeply moved by the evidence I saw of pioneers with "green thumbs." They hardly had fixed up their modest caravans when they also finished planting lawns, flower beds and even shrubs and trees, overcoming the obstacles of poor soil (if it can be called soil!) heat, drought and winter frosts and storms. For these and other Israeli "conquerors of the desert," I want to suggest planting now (October) the following spring-flowering annuals (in ground enriched by compost or manure additions): African daisies. calendulas, snapdragons, stocks, pansies and sweet alyssum. All new plants should be shaded by paper mulch or broad leaves for some time, until they are well established and can resist hot sunshine.

· Herbs such as horseradish (cochlearia armoracia, haseret in Hebrew) should be planted now to have a first harvest ready for Pessah. It can be easily grown in every soil. Buy a piece of horseradish root at your greengrocer's about 12-15 cm. long and plant it in well-dug soil, leaving 1-2 cm. of the root stem uncovered. No manure is needed, but watering is during dry spells, Roots will spread and grow quickly un-derground, and after 5 months, you will be able to cut your first harvest (some of the side-sprouting roots). Only the rocts of horseradish are used as a condiment. The leathery leaves and the small yellow flowers are worthless. If you are a lover of this flery accompaniment to roust beef, you can save money by growing your own.

A CHANCE trip on a tour bus past Yad Vashem and an inaccurate statement by the guide led Ilse-Joseph to discover — 23 years after their deaths in Auschwitz — the sad fates of her two daughters and two states lider.

Since that momentous day in Jerusalem Ilse Joseph — who will celebrate her 80th birthday next month — has worked to keep alive the memory of the Holocaust and of its victims. Using the only profession she ever knew, as a concert violinist, she has toured the world on a campaign for peace and harmony, telling her personal tale of grief.

In 1965, the anguish over her children intensified by the recent death of her second husband, she travelled for the first time to Israel. Passing by the Holocaust memorial near Mt. Herzl, the guide told passengers that "here, every Jew who died in the Holocaust is registered by name" (in fact, only one million of the six million are listed in the records). "I had never heard of Yad Vashem before," recalls the Berlin-born Mrs. Joseph, who lives in England now.

Believing she was finally to learn the truth, she went to the documentation room at Yad Vashem. Using the deportation date mentioned in her children's last postcard to her (whose stamps were affixed by a German officer who apparently felt sorry for them). Mrs Joseph found written confirmation that all four had been gassed in Auschwitz in 1942. She later learned that her 18-year-old daughter Marion and 15-year-old Ellen had died on Yom Kip-

"I was relieved, of course, because it finally meant certainty. All those years, there was always the slight hope of a mother that the children were somehow still alive, even though I knew that they were gone. But the fact that the two girls had died on Yom Kippur — the day of Atonement — told me that I must not hate and must teach a Dutch Jewish orphanage, hoping the girls would be saved. And she smuggled her precious Dalla Costa violin (built in 1750, identical to one played by Mozart), which her father had given her in 1918, out of Germany. It remained safe in a bank in Holland until after the war. In 1937, after the death of her first husband, she met Curt Joseph, whose two children Heinz and Anita, were about the same ages as her daughters. A sought-after inventor, Curt was helped to escape out of a German concentration camp and to reach Britain.

WITH HER own children in The Hague, lise left Germany in 1940 for England, unable to bring Curt's children with her. "It was a desperate decision," she recalls. "We hoped we could save them." She and Curt married, and Hitler's invasion of Holland in May frustrated their plans to get her two daughters out. She never saw any of the four youngsters again.

She felt that her German

She felt that her German reparations money and proceeds from performances and records must not be spent on mundane things but be dedicated to her children's memory and promoting understanding. Using the Dalla Costa violin she had rescued, Ilse gave free concerts in England "as a gift to the country that saved us from the Nazis and gave us a home."

The same year as her first visit to Israel, she went to Germany, "to speak about the Holocaust and to play. I wanted to show that I didn't hate. Every year since then I have gone there." Young Germans who want to know about the past flock to her lectures. Young offenders in a German prison opted to attend her lecture and, after hearing her rendition of Max Bruch's "Kol Nidre," stood up silently, reluctant to spoil the mood by applauding.

Proceeds from her records have gone to the "Save the Children's Fund" to help youngsters in Northern Ireland, Bangladesh and Vietnam. She established a music scholarship for Israelis at the Yemin Orde Youth Village near Haifa.

Though vigorous and looking many years younger than her age, lise finds that her eyes are weakening, and that she can no longer read notes during long hours of practice. She gave the violin to the Royal Academy of Music in London. "I took the failing of my eyesight as a sign that I must move on to doing other things. I will go on speaking about the past and the need for love until the last day of my life."

ISRAEL CHAMBER ORCHESTRA, Lukas Fots, conducting and plane (Tel Aviv, Museum, October 17). Sheriff: Sonats for Chamber Orchestra; Haydn: Symphony No. 60 in C Major (""ID Distratla"); Hindemith: Theme and Four Temperaments.

WITH LUKAS FOSS at the helm of the Chamber Orchestra, the performance had the effect of a refreshing breeze. Not only was the choice of works unconventional but Lukas Foss also proved how exciting his music-making can be.

Noam Sheriff's Sonata is a work that creates an atmosphere and one that delivers a message. The meditative first movement and the dynamic, bustling-with-activity second contrast beautifully. Sheriff hardly could have hoped for a more sympathetic and understanding conductor than Lukas Foss.

Haydn was a real surprise — both as a composition and as a performance. Papa Haydn wrote a symphony that must have amused, or perhaps even shocked, his contemporaries: six movements, changes of temperament (tuning) in the middle of a passage, pizzicati effects, fanfares, etc. All this seemed an ideal opportunity for Mr. Foss to demonstrate a charming, seemingly spontaneous inventiveness and his obviously strongly felt motivations. A musician's imagination was manifest in every phrase.

With Hindemith's "Four Temperaments," Foss struck a deeper and more serious note. Playing the plane part in a personal, inductive manner and conducting simultaneously from the keyboard, Foss again brought to light, as he did in the Sheriff and Haydn works, a captivating spectrum of musical Besides providing the audience with a rewarding musical experience. Foss never neglected the demands of achieving technical and sonoral perfection: This was an evening in which new life was infused into orchestra and audience. The reaction from orchestra and audience was immediate and enthusiastic.

Ultraviolet rays may replace chlorine in water

By MACABEE DEAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The chlorination of water is on its way out; the use of ultraviolet radiation to sterilize water is the wave of the future.

This was stated yesterday by Meir Viezel, head of the Tana plant at Kibbutz Netiv Halamed-Heh, professor Shimon Ulitzur, of the Technion, and Shaul Arlosoroff, of Haifa Universi-

The kibbutz is now manufacturing several different sizes of their 'ultraviolet sterilizer.'' both for use in Israel and for export.

Interest in purchasing units has already been shown by firms in South Africa, Africa and Asia. The kibbutz is also negotiating with Tnuva, to sterilize its dairy products, and with Mekorot, which plans to install several units

The device, which is called ' is already in use to sterilize supplies of potable water, for can-ning factories, cosmetics plants, soft-drink production, poultry breeding, and fish ponds. Units to be installed in each flat, or in a condominium, or even at the entrance of settlements, are now being produced. The plant can produce several thousand units of different sizes each month. According to Viezel, the use of the device in a poultry run increased the amount of meat on the birds by 15 per cent. It did this by reducing the incidence of disease, and it also allowed a sharp cut-back in the use of medicines to keep the birds

Arlosoroff noted that chlorination would probably be abandoned since the costs of using this method were constantly rising. Chlorine was obtained (even in Israel, which has a plentiful supply available from the Dead Sea) as a byproduct of refining petroleum, and the cost of the latter

"Another reason for seeking alternative methods of sterilizing water other than chlorine stems from the fact that recent tests in the U.S. indicate that chlorine, by acting on certain plastics used for packaging. may be a cause of some types of

Moreover, the use of water recycled from sewage was also a potential source of disease, and ultraviolet sterilization reduces this danger to a

It is claimed that when used properly, the ultraviolet rays kill 99.9999 per cent of all microorganisms, including viruses. bacteria, yeasts, fungi and protozoa.

The water may be used immediately after being sterilized. The process affects neither the taste nor the mineral content of the water.

"However, one drawback is that it should be installed as close as possible to the outlet of the drinking water, since it is possible that if the water stands for a long time, or if it is exposed to any type of contamina-tion, such as dirty water infiltrating into an underground water pipe, the effects of sterilization become worthless.'

Thus, the makers do not believe the device can be installed nationwide. It will have to be installed at individual villages, blocks of houses, condominiums, apartment houses, and individual flats.

The smallest unit costs about IL10,000 and the largest about IL125,-000. However, when the kibbutz plant moves into mass production, the cost can be reduced considerably, perhaps to as little as one-quarter of the present price.

HAIFA. - The Fisheries Department has put special control teams into the field to prevent the poaching of grey mullet try at the mouths of the few remaining unpolluted streams. The fry, which are vitally important for stocking fish ponds and Lake Kinneret, "are one of the few fishery resources this country is blessed with, and we intend to look after them," Meir Bar-Ilan, of the department told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.
The grey mullet (kifon in Hebrew) is a sea fish which adapts easily to sweet water and breeds at the mouths of rivers and streams.

The fry, which are caught each year in the breeding season, which has now started, are the only source for stocking the ponds and Lake Kinneret. All efforts by breeding experts in Israel and abroad to breed the grey mullet in captivity have

Experiments have been carried out for many years, but so far they have not yet advanced beyond the actual spawning in captivity stage, which in itself is considered a considerable achievement. However, the fry all die within a week of spawning in captivity, and the experts have failed to keep them alive. beyond this period, for reasons not

The secretary of the Fish Breeders Union, Marco Solomon, told The Post that breeders raise about 600 tons of grey mullet annually in the ponds. The amount is limited by the number of fry that can be caught during the breeding season. Another 200 tons are marketed annually from Lake Kinneret, which is stocked directly by the department.

Solomon said the pond-raised mullets are far superior to those caught off Israel's shores, because these latter assimilate the bad taste of the polluted off-shore waters, and have an unpleasant, oily taste.

The mullet is presently sold at IL130 per kg. retail, and the demand keeps up with the supply.

The Fisheries Department forbids the catching of the fry by anybody without a special licence, which is granted only to the breeders. This is done to prevent profiteering by un-licensed fry fishers, who because of their lack of training also cause much damage to the try fisheries.

Our control teams lurk around the river mouths in all weather, and round the clock. Any unlicensed fry he has poached confiscated, and is also taken to court. Bar-Ilan said. Thanks to these efforts the mullet fisheries have been kept going, he

THE VEGETABLE Marketing Board so far this season has paid IL124m. to farmers growing tomatos for industry. The farmers still have IL67m. coming to them for having supplied industry with 117,000 tons of tomatos this year.

THE HISTADRUT'S Agricultural Centre is now making a study in the profitability of the wine grape industry. Farmers in the Histadrut sector believe that this branch is profitable and has a large export potential. Until now most of the wine grape business was in the hands of private farmers, who also operate their own winery as a cooperative.

THE EXPORT of early ripening grapefruits called "Jordan River" has just ended. All in all over 1.75m. crates were exported, compared to 1.5m. last year. According to the Citrus Marketing Board these early grapefruits fetched a price 20 per cent higher than they did a year ago. Board officials believe that grapefruit exports this year will be bigger than a year ago, due mainly to sales to the Far East. The board's export target is 50m. crates of citrus during the present export season. This should bring in $275m. FOB, instead of $250m, last sesson.

PARDESS Sindicate of Israel, apnounces that it is again accepting orders to send gift packages of citrus abroad. For most parts of Europe the price is IL775 per crate of 20' kilograms. To most places in the U.S. the price for a 16 kilogram crate is IL800 and IL600 for 10 kilograms.

Selling sales training to salesmen By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN

TEL AVIV. — "Israeli salesmen are as good as any in the world," stated Bill Stanley, managing director of Tack Training International, Tack is the largest concern in the world specializing in management and sales trainlig courses. Prices rise as demand for shares continues

TEL AVIV. — The post-Leumi strike share rally continued on its merry way yesterday, as demand for equities resulted in across the board gains, Trading activity was at a high level, but nowhere near the pace recorded last Thursday. Trading in shares exceeded the Illiem. mark. A good number of issues were registered as "buyers only" and were automatically marked up by the mandatory five per cent, without any actual trading taking place. This had the tendency of keeping trading volumes considerably lower than would have been the case otherwise. The volume of trading in the bond market also alackened, but it was still a respectable figure at IL148.6m. The prices of most indexlinked bonds continued to decline by about one per cent. It seems that the share market is really being fuelled by the switching over from bonds to shares.

In response to an initial demand of IL13.2m. the shares of Bank Leumi saw their price jump by seven points, to 476. In the past three sessions the shares of the country's largest bank have appreciated by more than four per cent. The value of the shares traded yesterday was in excess of ILA5m.

The question now arises how much longer the present rally can continue. In spite of the very large trading volumes much of the activity could be traced to institutional investors, who were quick to jump on the bandwagon. The public was much slower to react and apparently has been a relatively small participant in the market. Therefore it would not be surprising if during the latter part of this week profit-taking were to set in.

Commercial bank shares continued to advance smartly. Union Bank was the percentage winner, with a gain of 1.7 per cent in the wake of an eight-point rise. IDB was four points higher, while Happalim chipped in with a three-point gain. General Bank and FIBI each came through with two-point Yardenia II.1 shares led a rising insurance sector. The Yardenia shares jumped by 7.2 per cent, to 164. Gains of up to three per cent were the order of the day among other shares in the group.

It seems that the shares of the Israel Electric Corporation have become a speculators' delight, as their price continues to seesaw, Yesterday their price rose by nearly nine per cent. to 244.

In the real estate and land development sector the securities of the Israel Land Development Corp. were all higher by five to eight per cent. Solel Boneh C shares were "buyers only." Rassco ordinary were by far the best market performers, with a jump of 31 points, reflecting a gain of 15.1 per cent. In a strong industrial group Elco II.1 and Argaman Pref. (R) were both "Buyers only." Moller was 8.7 per cent higher, while Electric Wire (B) was nearly seven per cent improved. Ampa and Export (R) were "buyers only" among investment company shares. A number of issues, such as Clai Real Estate and Clal Industries chalked up gains in excess of five per cent.

"The yield reflects the difference between the "theoretical" value of bonds — based on the date of issue and current Co-L indexes plus accumulated interest — and the actual market price it is based on the assumption that future Co-L index increases will be zero. A negative yield indicates bonds sold at a premium, a positive figure bonds sold at a discount) (These prices are unofficial)

NRP — especially since its own leader, Burg, has ambitions in that direction. Should Burg be appointed to the post, the Liberals could be offered his Interior Ministry by way of compensation. Burg himself declared yesterday that he is satisfied with his present post, although this is not taken seriously even by his colleagues. Burg's appointment, however, might not sit well with the

In the background is the prime minister's own Herut faction, which conceivably could claim the foreign affairs portfolio, since Dayan nominally entered the cabinet on the Herut quota, However, with Begin's unchallenged authority in his party. it is thought that this hurdle could easily be overcome.

In Herut, the foreign minister was highly unpopular from the outset. He was seen as pulling Begin to a dovish position and was regarded as fickle and as an opportunist.

The feeling in Herut yesterday was 'good riddance.' Knesset faction chief Haim Kaufman already said yesterday that Herut would be satisfied with a deputy foreign minister from its ranks. Some mention was made of Knesset Speaker Yitzhak Shamir of Herut as a possible replacement for Davan.

Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich told political reporters yesterday that "Yigael Yadin, Shmuel Tamir, and Yose! Burg would all make fine foreign ministers and are all eminently qualified for the job." He said he would agree to swap his Finance portfolio for the deputy premiership, but only if that post were vacant and if the prime minister had no other deputy. Ehrlich also said he has two candidates for foreign minister whom he will recommend to the prime minister this morning. It is thought these are Yadin and Burg, as he might wish to take either of their portfolios.

To Ehrijch's mind, the government will continue its full term in office and will not grow more bawkish in Dayan's absence.

A close Dayan aily for years, Zalman Shoval of the State List said that "this government had little to justify its existence beforehand, and now there is nothing at all to say in its favour. Dayan was right in his conclusion that the government is going about the autonomy negotiations the wrong way." The NRP yesterday renewed its pressure for a national unity government with Labour participation. Labour quickly poured cold water on the idea but the NRP remained convinced that the last word had not yet come from Labour. NRP secretary-general Danny Vermus said Labour might yet be brought around.

He added that "Dayan's controversial statements had contributed little to the government's functioning. The party was unhappy about his refusal to appoint its people to ambassadorial posts."

Speaking for the Labour opposition, party chairman Shimon Peres said that "the whole government must take a leaf out of Dayan's book and resign. A wall-to-wall coalition is entirely out of the question. There must be new elections immediately to give the nation a viable and responsible government that would reach the right decisions both in domestic and foreign policy.

Former foreign minister Abba Eban said, 'Dayan was right to resign. His mistake was to join the Likud government."

Leading Labour dove Yossi Sarid and the Tehiya's Moshe Shamir both said the resignation once more illustrated Dayan's uncanny ability to flee from a sinking ship. In separate but nearly identical statements, both said the government is a failure and should resign. The Dayan resignation, they argued, came two years

The NRP Young Guard indicated yesterday that it would not be averse to seeing a DM member appointed foreign minister. The group, which has not always been on best terms with the interior minister, believes its party cannot very well give up the Interior Ministry which it has held for decades, because of all the party appointees in the ministry.

The group also indicated that it would be satisfied if NRP Knesset faction head Yehuda Ben-Meir were appointed deputy foreign minister.

One more possibility to cope with the NRP's possible displeasure at an increase in the DM's prestige should Yadin be appointed foreign minister is to give Israel Katz's Labour and Social Affairs portfolio to Moshe Nissim and make Katz, who is not a Knesset member, minister without portfolio instead.

It was indicated that the DM would also not be averse to having Ben-Meir as deputy foreign minister, if the DM got the Foreign Ministry.

Dayan bails out

AFTER THE FACT, it may seem only inevitable that Moshe Dayan should have called it quits as foreign minister, a post he filled for a little more than two years; and his extraordinary television appearance Friday night now makes perfect sense as

It is, indeed, as though Mr. Dayan were responding to a query in this journal just yesterday as to why, by his presence, he chose to prop up a Cabinet with which he was so at odds.

The step he took was not, of course, at all in the tradition of Israeli politics, where ministers do not as a rule resign merely because they have failed in the discharge of their duties, or because they are out of sympathy with administration policies. But it was perhaps the thing to expect of Moshe Dayan.

Whether the tremors he has visibly sent through the system will appreciably hasten the Likud government's demise is at the moment anyone's guess. The foreign minister has been a lone wolf since he broke with the Labour Party following the 1977 elections, forming a faction of precisely one - himself.

Those ex-Rafi, now La'am, politicians who have been looking to him as the ex-comrade who, by coming back to the fold, might make them look respectable, are bound to be disappointed. If anything, Mr. Dayan's parting blast at official policy for its devotion to dead dogma has helped measure the distance between his position and theirs. The distance, it turns out, is considerable.

To some Cabinet stalwarts the departure is no doubt a case of good riddance. It should make it easier for the majority to run foreign policy by the book, to shuffle posts around to everyone's satisfaction — and to the NRP's delight, result in the hiring of more religious personnel for diplomatic posts.

It is safe to suggest that popular opinion views it, like critics from both Right and Left, as further evidence of the disintegration of the present regime.

What Mr. Dayan has found particularly intolerable in the foreign policy endorsed by Mr. Begin was the autonomy plank. This so-called 18-point programme, drafted by the NRP, would retain Israel's military government as the source of authority in Judea, Samaria and Gaza even during the tenure of the autonomy.

Because he saw the plan as a delusion and a complete nonstarter, Mr. Dayan refused to take part in the autonomy talks with Egypt. Thus the Israel delegation to the discussions came to be chaired by, of all people, Interior Minister Burg, while Foreign Minister Dayan was made to concern himself with what he felt were secondary matters.

As he made clear on Friday, it is Mr. Dayan's opinion that the only way to win the necessary support of the people of Judea, Samaria and Gaza, is to replace the military government with a civilian administration, even unilaterally. Nothing, of course, could be further from the mind of the present Cabinet.

It is also arguable that the concept of autonomy unveiled by Mr. Dayan himself to the Knesset nearly two years ago was much more "militaristic" than his current view. But whereas Mr. Dayan has seen fit to adjust his thinking to changing facts, his colleagues have strenuously tried not to follow suit.

Next to runaway inflation, the future of the administered territories is the thorniest problem facing the country's leadership today. It should be clear enough by now that no solution to either problem need be expected from Mr. Begin's Government, however shuffled.

PAWNS OF THE PARTIES

Russian immigrants have been disillusioned by their dealings with the Alignment and with the Likud — and for good reason, writes MIKHAIL AGURSKY.

THE LAST Knesset elections provided some people with an opportunity to claim that Russian immigrants in Israel shifted the Israeli political balance to the right and even were responsible for the Likud's success. Fortunately or not, this is not the case. Even if all the Russian Jews here had voted and did so the same way, in 1977, this could not account more than three Knesset seats. But even this electoral potential was not used by them — for several reasons. First of all, many of them according to some estimates, more than half) could not participate in elections since their addresses were wrong so they were not made aware they could vote or notified where to

Many Russian Jews voted for the Alignment, especially in Haifa, some for the (now split) Democratic Movement for Change and some, sad to report, for Flatto-Sharon.

Nevertheless the general mood among Russian Jews at the time was anti-Alignment. There were many reasons for that. An apparently decisive one was strictly political. The Alignment could not distinguish between the social and political orientation of Soviet Jews and assumed their hatred of the Soviet political system, which is called a socialist one, would extend to its socialist philosophy. That's why the Alignment, fearful that Russian Jews would vote for the Likud because of their supposed antisocialist orientation, decided from the onset of the recent wave of aliya to discourage Russian Jews from political activity. This was managed in several ways.

First of all, any potential political leaders were neutralized, and an attempt was made to divert their energies to other subjects. In place of the political activity that was artifically paralysed, some ersatz organisations were invented, which supposedly represented the Russian aliya. One such organisation was the USSR Association of Immigrants. Meanwhile, the real political leaders persed and neutralized.

The fact that the above-mentioned union didn't reflect the mood of Russian olim can be demonstrated simply. The union was an Alignment creation but the dominant sympathy of the Russian immigrants at the time was pro-Likud. All this was a severe blow to the Russian olim since free political activity was a very important concept for people completely deprived of this human right in the USSR. The prospect of such activity was important during the formation of the decision to make aliya and that of many Jews to come to Israel instead of the U.S., where no immigrant could play a significant political role. Many Russian Jews, alienated from political life in Israel by bureaucratic intrigues, felt frustrated. A dynamic social force. so much needed in Israel, was treated as a marginal suspicious movement — like troublemakers.

That's why many Russian immigrants expected erroneously a national and moral revival from the Likud. Their disillusionment with the Likud was incomparably greater than with the Alignment. It was not the Likud's politics but its social emptiness that showed it to be irrelevant to the basic orientation of Russian Jews. Moreover, the Likud not only repeated the mistakes of the Alignment, but also made new ones. which almost totally alienated Russian Jews from the Likud.

THE LIKUD was like the Alignment in that it, too, seemed to believe only in bureaucracy. Its leaders didn't comprehend the mood of the people. Only political intrigues seemed to interest Likud functionaries. It was sufficient for them to influence those eople they perceived as representatives of the group.

A crisis in housing led to the first deep dissatisfaction with the Likud. The majority of Russian clim affected by the housing shortage came to believe that Housing Minister David Levy was deliberately short-changing them in favour of his own Oriental con-also a large-scale demoralization of the group grew out of what one can call "Flatto-Sharonizaton."

The Russian immigrants, atomized by the Alignment, had no recognized political leadership. The Likud recruited ambitious people, those who wanted simply to take advantage of the Likud and would have deserted it had the party not seemed so promising as it did just after elec-

The situation was not lost on Flatto-Sharon, who has been cam-paigning among Russian Jews since 1977, presenting himself as a Jewish hero deserving adoration. He con-trived to get the support of the Association of Soviet Immigrants; it's chairman, Grisha Feigin, signed paid advertisements that appeared in most Israeli newspapers, claiming that Flatto-Sharon was the best friend of Russian Jewry. Flatto-Sharon also managed to create a myth about his successes in 'saving" Russian Jews in the USSR.

All this encouraged other little 'Flatto-Sharons,' who immediately seized the opportunity to legitimize their doubtful past in the USSR and make it useful for the present. Thus the electoral success of the Likud and its inability to be a leading moral force in the country had, in general, a corrupting influence on Russian Jews.

It was clear that in Israel political rivals are concerned about how to kick their adversaries, never mind what is really happening in Soviet Jewish aliya, which is considered in terms of bureaucratic institutions and not as the strong dynamic movement it is. This was a most negative development in terms of mobilizing a new wave of aliya from the USSR.

But something happened recently that indicates that the Israeli political establishment will soon be challenged. Elections in the Jerusalem section of this association afforded Russian olim an opportunity to speak out, when they had been denied any other framework for doing so.

Sir. - With reference to your article of October 17 on the scheduled dedication of a 20-dunam park on the western slopes of the Mount of Olives in honour of Orson Hyde, I wish to call attention to some facts about Orson Hyde which your reporter failed to mention.

Hyde, one of the earliest international missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, visited Jerusalem in 1841 in the course of a 20,000-mile missionary journey, the main purpose of which was to carry the gospel to the Jews. Naturally, Hyde's famous prayer for the return of the Jews to the Holy Land, which he uttered from the top of the Mount of Olives, reflected his concern over the stubbornness of the Jews in clinging to their faith: 'Grant, therefore, O Lord, in the name of they well-beloved Son, Jesus Christ, to remove the barrenness and sterility of this land and let Thy great kindness conquer and subdue the unbelief of Thy people. Do Thou take from them their stony heart, and give them a heart of flesh; and may the sun of Thy favour dispel the cold mists of darkness which beclouded their atmosphere." As a Jerusalemite who suffers, apparently, from the malady of a stony Jewish heart, I do hope that the municipal authorities, who have invested so much planning and enthusiasm in the park and given it their blessing, will be kind enough to erect a fitting memorial plaque on the site — one that will highlight Or-son Hyde's true relationship with the
